Capital Times Given Press Seat At Convention

The Capital Times has been accorded a press seat at the Republican National convention in June.

The Capital Times today received notice from James L. Wright, chairman of the standing committee on correspondents for the republican national committee, stating that this newspaper has been assigned a seat in the press gallery immediately in front of the convention platform. The Capital Times is fortunate in obtaining the assignment as Mr. Wright states that it was necessary to refuse a large number of newspaper requests because of limited capacity.

William T. Evjue, editor of The Capital Times, will be in the press section at the convention for The Capital Times. Mr. Evjue will keep readers of this newspaper informed of the doings of the Wisconsin delegation and will interpret the convention from a Wisconsin viewpoint. Mr. Evjue will also send back his impressions of the convention under the caption "Travelogues of An Editor." This is the third national convention which Mr. Evjue will witness.

Peace Meet Body Acts On Platform

Committee Is Named at Meeting of Delegates In Labor Temple

Second Meeting On June 4

Vigorous Debating Marks Initial Gathering of Societies

Seventy-five delegates representing local church and civic clubs and societies interested in the formation of a federation opposed to war gathered at the Labor Temple on Thursday night, and after a session marked by vigorous debate, appointed a steering committee to arrange another meeting to be held June 4.

The peace delegates found it difficult to get started, but after they had listened to speech after speech and a deadlock seemed imminent, a resolution was introduced which paved the way for further action.

The resolution was introduced by the Rev. A. N. Chapman, pastor of Trousdale Methodist church, and was supported by Mrs. E. C. Hoebel and W. L. Forrest, the latter being chairman of the meeting.

The conference was held under the auspices of the Madison Federation of Labor.

The resolution provided for the appointment of a committee to draw up a platform and arrange another meeting.

The first committee consisted of 25 delegates representing all of the organizations present. This body was considered too unwieldy, and they appointed another committee consisting of 14 members of the whole body on the following night. The smaller body will draw up a constitution and simplify organization details in order that the meeting on June 4 will not be delayed in obtaining action on the peace movements.

Members of the steering committee are Irene Griffin, Rose Woldenberg, Fred Mason and Glenn Turner, from the labor unions; Mrs. E. T. Baile, Mrs. L. C. Zucker, Rev. George E. Hunt, from the churches; Mabel E. Griswold, Mrs. W. G. Blever and Mrs. Louise Kahmberg, from the women's clubs; E. C. Schultz, Mercedes Zander, William Kirsch and Mrs. L. Bascom, members at large. Rev. Hunt was named temporary chairman and Fred Mason temporary secretary.

New Road Maps at A. C. are Motoring Guides

A series of eleven new maps, conforming to the new state highway commission markings have just been received by the association of Commerce and will be used in answering inquiries of tourists and others interested in the highways of the state. These maps were printed as a substitute for the annual motor guide book published by the association in past years.

BLANCHARDVILLE—Miss Maybelle B. Chandler, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler here, was married this week to Reginald Waldo, New York, an attaché of the Missouri highway department.

Capital Times To Read Returns On Big Fight

A round by round and blow by blow account of the Georges Carpentier-Tommy Gibbons fight at Michigan City, Ind., tomorrow afternoon, will be read from the King st. side of The Capital Times' building to fight fans Saturday afternoon.

The Capital Times will be served by an Associated Press wire direct from the ringside, and local fans will have an opportunity of getting the account of the battle as fast as it is fought.

Bryn Griffiths, sporting editor, will read the round by round account. If you want a reliable account of the fight—and want it as fast as it is humanely possible to get it—then join The Capital Times' party Saturday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Rich Youth Is Questioned In Franks' Case

N. E. Leopold, Owner of Spectacles Found Near Body

(By the Associated Press) CHICAGO — Nathan E. Leopold, Jr., 19, student and a son of a millionaire manufacturer questioned for hours early today said he believed the spectacles found near the body of Robert Franks, 13, son of a millionaire, kidnapped on May 21 was found were his and that he lost them while on a bird study expedition. The body was found in a railroad culvert and the glasses were found some distance away.

"I don't blame the police for holding me," Leopold said. "I was out near the culvert on Saturday, and Sunday before the body was found and it is quite probable I lost my glasses out there."

He explained that he could establish an alibi and that he did not know the Franks boy, although he knew of the family by reputation. Young Leopold has long been interested in ornithology and has written for ornithological publications.

Richard Loeb, son of another millionaire, a friend of young Leopold, although no suspicion was directed toward Loeb. Richard had another friend of Leopold, was questioned today.

The spectacles, one of the chief clues in the mystery, caused Leopold to be held for interrogation. From an optical company the police learned that the prescription for the glasses would fit those said to be Leopold's.

Leopold readily said that he had gone to the swamp prairie perhaps fifty times on bird study trips. He said he had not worn glasses frequently and did not know what had happened to his.

Leopold is said to be a brilliant student, and says he is familiar with six or seven languages.

Anti American Feeling Is Spreading In Japan

TOKYO — Anti-American feeling engendered by enactment of the United States immigration law with its Japanese exclusion provision threatens to become more widespread and intense, backed as it is by the jingo press and a small group of nationalists, publicists, politicians, former service men and retired officers of the army and navy.

Official Japan, represented by the Kiyouga government, absolutely opposes any retaliatory measure, and although Viscount Cato remains silent upon that point it is believed in high quarters that the new ministry he is expected to form within the fortnight, will continue the same policy.

The annual consumption of cheese in Wisconsin amounts to $1.50 per person, according to statistics prepared by the department of markets. The consumption of butter is estimated at $9 per person while the annual purchase of cosmetics per woman is $12.

PLATTEVILLE—The senior class of the normal school here will present Zangwill's play, "Melting Pot," June 2 and 3. Special scenery and stage settings are being built.

Veteran Drivers Race Neck and Neck In Early Laps of Classic

(By the Associated Press.)

INDIANAPOLIS—Joe Boyer of Detroit, driving relief, piloted L. L. Corum's eight cylinder speedster to a record breaking victory in the 12th annual 500 mile automobile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway today. Corum, an Indianapolis man surrendered his mount to Boyer after he had driven it 272 miles. Earl Cooper who led in the race most of the way finished second. Jimmy Murphy was third. The time of the winner was 5:05:23.51, an average of 98.24 miles an hour.

Houser Hits Well
Boyer held to his lead and at 490 miles was nearly a lap ahead of Cooper who was second. Murphy was third. Houser driving relief in Boyer's original mount, struck the wall on the south turn on his 17th lap. He was not injured.

Break Old Record
The time for the 500 miles was more than 3 1/2 miles an hour faster than the previous record for the distance. The previous mark 94.48 was established by Murphy in 1922.

Tommy Milton, last year's winner, after a day filled with trouble, retired in the 110th lap when a gas tank support broke.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Earl Cooper, riding as if the luck charm supplied him by race fans throughout the country had brought him fortune, was leading when the half way mark was passed today in the twelfth annual 500 mile race at the Speedway.

Cooper was pressed closely, however, by Bennett Hill and Jimmy Murphy who were in the same lap with him and in second and third position respectively.

Cooper's time for the 250 miles was 2:31:51.53, an average of 96.78 miles per hour. The best previous average time for 250 miles was made in 1921 when it was 94.02 miles per hour.

Cooper was compelled to make his first stop in the 105th lap. Murphy then took the lead with Hill in second place. Cooper was away again in 1:35 amid the crowd's cheers.

The speedway management announced that between 135,000 and 140,000 persons were in the grounds. This breaks last year's record attendance of 125,000.

Cooper, driving at better than 100 miles an hour, swept into the lead shortly after the 100 mile post had been passed. He held it at 150 miles, the time being 1:32:29.83, an average of 98.36 miles per hour.

Hill was in second place and Murphy third. Murphy lost 15 seconds making a tire change.

Murphy has the pole position by virtue of making the fastest speed in the qualifying trials. He completed the ten miles in 5:33:22, an average of 108.04 miles an hour.

The cars lined up for the start in successive rows, three abreast. In the first row alongside Murphy was Hartz and Milton. The line-up of the other rows follows:

Second row: Boyer, Hill and Cooper.

Third row: Jules Ellingboe, Cliff Durant and Antoine Mourre.

Eighth row: Fred Harder.

Berger Offers His Support to La Follette

If Senate Disavows the G. O. P. Socialists Will Vote for Him

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Victor L. Berger, socialist congressman Thursday night asserted that if Robert M. La Follette will give up his republican membership and become a candidate for president the socialists of the nation will support him and will nominate no ticket in opposition. Until Berger's statement it had been taken for granted that Eugene Debs, would again have the socialist support for president. Berger said that La Follette would have to make a positive disavowal of the republican party to get socialist support.

"The Wisconsin platform is good enough for the socialists," Berger said, referring to the platform recently announced by the La Follette supporters. "It does not go as far as the socialists go, but it is good enough for this year and next year the rest will come later. The socialists in supporting La Follette under the conditions named would not be giving up their principles they would merely be giving up their name. The socialists however will not be willing to be absorbed by La Folletteism if La Follette intends only to run as an individual or as a renegade republican."

The socialists have called a national convention to be held at Cleveland July 6-7, three days after the La Follette followers will have held their conference. The final decision on what the socialists will do will be determined by what is done at the La Follette convention.

"The socialist party will support a new political party, no matter the name, and accept La Follette as the leader," said Berger. "Wisconsin progressives, falsely labeled as republicans, recently adopted a state platform that is acceptable to socialists for they took most of their platform from the socialist creed."

If La Follette really intends to sponsor a new political movement, one that would give promise of living after he is dead and gone, then we are willing to join with him since he has already accepted most everything for which we socialists stand.

"La Follette, running as an individual or just as a kicking republican, would get nowhere. Napoleon tried one man rule and ended in disaster. La Follette is 69 years old. If he ran for president just as one person with ambition and without a set of principles that would represent a political movement and a new political alignment, then everything would be lost with his death. The socialists, of course, would not give up their party for an individual, but would join in a new political movement of third party if principles are adopted that would live after the death of leaders."

"Would the socialists be willing for their party to pass out of existence?" was asked of Mr. Berger. "Yes, is a new party is formed that largely represents the principles for which we have stood. In England the socialist party has been practically absorbed by the new labor party," replied Berger. "I care nothing about a party name. You can call an elephant a horse but it does not make it such. It is the principles of a political movement that count."

"Could a new party under La Follette win?" was asked of Berger. He replied: "Fremont organized a new party, the republican party, in 1855, but did not carry a single state. But the new movement lived and the party won in succeeding years. A La Follette third party could do better than Fremont's. It could carry Wisconsin and I think it could win in four or five other western states."

Mr. Berger said that if the socialists do not line up with La Follette they will nominate a candidate of their own. Mr. Debs, who was five times the party's candidate for the presidency, has let it be known that he does not care to run again.

OSHKOSH—A class of forty-five candidates will be initiated by the Knights of Columbus council here on June 1.

Madison's Per Capita Tax Is Third Highest

Rate of 6.903 Exceeded By West Allis and Wauwatosa

Buffalo City, Buffalo county, had the lowest actual tax rate of any city in Wisconsin during 1923, while Greenwood had the highest tax rate, according to statistics compiled by the state tax commission issued today. The lowest rate was .0190 and the highest, .0519. The average true tax rate of all cities of the state last year was .0296.

West Allis had the highest per capita tax with 69.05, Wauwatosa was second with 68.79 and Madison third with 63.03. Wauwatosa has the highest per capita true value assessment, with $3,116.99.

Madison's assessed value was $2,418,050, the highest tax rate was .0265.

The total general property taxes for the entire state last year showed an increase of approximately $2,500,000 over 1922, the report shows. Since 1920, the total general property tax increased from $50,760,000 to $55,850,000. The per capita taxes during the same period increased from $38.21 to $42.04.

City Honors Veterans of Three Wars

Madison Attorney, Speaker of Day, Scores War Time Graffiti

property as well as manpower. American people will see no justification in wars.

He scored the profiteer who stayed "at home" making millions and promises, while four million young men left good jobs to subject themselves to the scientific savagery of modern warfare that democracy might endure.

His address, in part, follows:
"Gathered here at the home of Lincoln's monument, we turn instinctively to pay our tribute to those who fought at his command—to the Grand Army of the Republic, whose surviving members furnish a living link between this generation and their great leader seated there in effigy. To say that you were soldiers of Lincoln is better praise than the finest flatter of speech can formulate or syllables of most exquisite cadence conjure up.

"Veterans of the war with Spain, we need only to say of you that you are worthy descendants—some of you in the flesh, all of you in the spirit of those brave men and their comrades who have gone before.

Tells of Reaction
"You men of a still younger day, who, in the recent clash of arms that shook the world, need laudation least of all. The memory of your achievements is too recent to require recital.

"Your experience with praise and promise and how little credit can mean is much too vivid to make you crave for more today. You marched to war amid a shower of verbal bouquets and sugary assurances that the earth and all that was in it would be yours when you returned.

"Then the atmosphere took on a sudden, saddening chill. Some of those who were the loudest for war were sick at the sight of a soldier when he asked for pay. Some-thing like a conspiracy was set on foot to cajole and coddle the returning soldier into acquiescence, to shame him out of his rights, by a lot of flub-dub about making merchandise of his patriotism.

"You who brought a proud German empire to its knees in a year and a half knocked at the ramparts of vested plunder for five years before you made your plea even partially effective. You found the American Junker offered a more stubborn resistance than his Prussian cousin overseas.

"Opposition to adjusted compensation had some elements of honesty about it, to be sure, but it was for the most part insincere. It was inspired by greed of a peculiarly mean and conspiratorial sort. Men who had made money out of the war in quantities that outran the dreams of all the fabled misers of old stood as a unit in their determination that no part of it should be disturbed in their possession to equalize the soldier's pay.

Swoboda Head of New State Co-op Council

Organization of Marketing Agencies Perfected At Meeting Here

The Wisconsin Cooperative Council, a state-wide organization of cooperative marketing agencies of the state, was organized at a conference of approximately 50 agricultural leaders here late yesterday.

F. G. Swoboda, Plymouth, manager of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers' Federation, was named president of the new council. J. J. Lamb, Fond du Lac, of the Equity Cooperative Stock Sales Co., was elected vice president, and H. W. Ullsperger, general manager of the Door County Fruit Growers Union, secretary-treasurer.

The purpose of the council, as outlined by Edward Nordman, state marketing commissioner, and J. D. Jones, commissioner of agriculture, will be to encourage cooperative marketing endeavors in the state. It also will seek united effort on part of cooperative associations and to coordinate activities of each.

Some difficulty was encountered at the conference over membership in the state association. As finally approved, the membership is composed of state-wide cooperative orders. The principal members of the council include: Wisconsin Cheese Producers' Federation; Foreign Cheese Producers' Federation; Wisconsin Cooperative Creameries association; Cooperative Live Stock Sales association; Door County Fruit Growers association; Northern Wisconsin Cooperative Tobacco Pool; Wisconsin Cranberry Sales Co.; Milwaukee Producers' association and representatives of milk producers supplying cities and those supplying manufacturing firms.

Emerson C. Madison, general counsel of the Wisconsin Tobacco Pool, and George Nelson, of the Wisconsin Cooperative Creameries association, were elected delegates at large on the council. Commissioners Nordman and Jones and a representative of the college of agriculture, will also be members of the state council, under the articles adopted.

Ben Gettelman Will Run for Sheriff

TWO RIVERS—A reward of $100 has been offered by the J. P. Galecki company, for information leading to the arrest of persons who robbed the store of merchandise valued at $1,000, over the weekend.

Ex-Soldiers Defrauded, Says Oddie

Complaining Veterans are Declared "Insane" He Tells Senate

(By the Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C.—Resuming in the senate on Thursday his attack on the administration of the veterans' bureau, Senator Oddie, Rep., Nevada, declared he was prepared to furnish President Coolidge with documentary evidence of the control of that organization by a "ring" which prevented adequate care of former soldiers.

Senator Oddie presented dozens of cases, identified by their file number in the bureau, which, he asserted, proved "maladministration, neglect and violation of public trust."

"The present director is hampered by the continued authority of those in the 'ring'," he said, "and those officials are backed by influential individuals, who probably do not know the situation which now exists."

President Coolidge gets his information on the subject from the director, the Nevada senator said, "who gets his from the ring."

Senator Oddie said complaining veterans have been punished "by being declared insane" and employees who protested "have been thrown into the street."

"If the director does not want to stand convicted of gross incompetency," Senator Oddie concluded, he will move at once to reorganize the bureau from top to bottom. If he does not, he should be removed from office forthwith."

Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, said that a reign of terror was sweeping some western hospitals because of treatment "involving spinal punctures."

"They believe it leads to paralysis," he said, "and in more than a few cases, the patients have become paralyzed. The doctors say that condition would have appeared regardless of the treatment, but the boys are in mortal terror of it."

receive the consent of the many other nations, would be impracticable. "While there are those who think we would be exposed to peril by adhering to this court, I am unable to attach great weight to their arguments. Whatever differences, whatever perils exist for us in the world come any way, whether we oppose or support the court. I am one of those who believe we would be safer, and that we would be meeting our duties better, by supporting it and making every possible use of it. I feel confident that such action would make a greater America, that it would be productive of a higher and finer national spirit, and of a more complete national life."

All executive departments of the government were closed for the day and the senate was in recess, and arrangements to make the president's address audible by radio to three or four million persons throughout the country were made by stations WJAF at New York, WJAR at Providence, R. I. and WCAP at Washington.

Morning exercises at Arlington, arranged by the Woman's Relief Corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Legion of Women, Sons of Veterans and Auxiliaries, included a preliminary parade around the White House by veterans of the civil, Spanish and world wars, with survivors of the Confederate forces participating. Another ceremony at Arlington was arranged by the National American War Mothers, and the Flanders Field Cross was selected for a special tribute to the American Legion posts.

A Great Common Cause

by Hal Cochran
TODAY all the nation has reason to pause. To stand in respect to a great common cause; The aged and young will let labors all cease While they honor the ones who have battled for peace: A peace that's been made much more solid today. By the men of the Khaki, the Blue and the Gray.

THE turmoils have come and they've faded away As wrong has been downed and the right given sway: Our fathers and sons fought to settle alarms, They have willingly answered the summons to arms; What had to be done they were ready to do— Were the men of the Khaki, the Gray and the Blue.

AND we who survive hold in memory fast Respect for those fathers and sons who have passed; 'Tis little at best that the living can do, Our message is silent, but heartfelt and true; For the Gray and the Blue and the Khaki we pause— For theirs after all was a Great Common Cause. Irene Niebuhr Wins 3 Sided School Meet

Others Place in Eastern District Contests Here

Irene Niebuhr, Sunnyside school, township of Burke, took first honors in the annual spelling, arithmetic and penmanship contest held in the assembly chamber of the capitol Thursday afternoon. The winner receives a prize of $5 and a trip to the State fair at Milwaukee and the school of which she is a member receives a pennant. Miss Niebuhr's average for the three subjects was 109.

Three prizes were given other winners. Adeline Simonson, Oak Park school, Deerfield, won second place with an average of 104; Juanita Pommerenck, Alice school, Blooming Grove, third place with an average of 100. The prize for second place was $5 and for third, $2.50.

The contest was attended by about 60 pupils of the first district of Dane county and was presided over by Miss Eleanor Weisman, county superintendent, assisted by Miss Mary Meyers and Esther Krakow, supervisors. The contestants were chosen in elimination tests in the various townships of the first district the three highest in the township being permitted to enter the Thursday's event.

Others receiving honorable mention for an average of over 90 were Gladys Everson, 94, Lenaas school; Christiana; Verna Saunders, 93, Carpenter school, Christiana; Arlette Otto, 91, Bailey school, Sun Prairie.

Birchwood Postoffice Is Destroyed By Fire

BIRCHWOOD, Wis.—Fire, fanned by a high wind, destroyed the local postoffice building, owned by Dr. C. F. Andrews, and the Morey building here late Wednesday with a total loss estimated at $35,000. The Citizens bank building was damaged. Nearby cities aided Birchwood when calls were sent out for additional equipment. The fire was the worst in the history of the little city.

Mark Smith, Civil War Vet Honored By Students

Mark Smith, G. A. R. veteran, on Friday was presented a large bouquet of flowers by the children of the Lapham school as a token of their esteem. For several years Mr. Smith has been the Memorial day speaker in the Lapham school, but this year an accident which resulted in a broken leg, made it impossible for him to come to the school to speak.

Monroe Posse Takes Boy Who Stole $7,000
MONROE—Trapped as he looted a rural mail box of a dummy letter which he supposed contained $2,000 in Liberty bonds, Albert Ault, 19, Orangeville, Ill., was caught after dodging shots of a farmer posse near here. Ault is charged with the $7,000 burglary at the Oak Kistler farm home May 5.

Ault faked Mr. Kistler's signature and wrote a local bank, enclosing a receipt for the bonds and saying he wished them sent him. The bank suspected a plot, since the receipt was among the notes and certificates of deposit stolen.

"Dead" Boy Meets Folks Going After "Corpse"
APPLETON, Wis.—Like Mark Twain, Leonard Martin of this city is able to state that reports of his death were "grossly exaggerated." Martin met his parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Martin of Shuonon, as they were burying with an undertaker to South Green, Wis., near here, to get his "body," which they believed was cold in death beside the wreckage of his automobile. "Information" had been given the parents that their son had been killed in an accident near Greenville.

Band Opens Varsity Night Event Today

"W" Awards, Bonfire to Mark Program at University

The Varsity night program will be opened at 8:45 o'clock tonight with a concert given by the university band on Lincoln terrace.

Prof. T. E. Jones will award the "W"s after the concert at 7 o'clock and basketball charms also will be awarded. The winner of the conference medal is to be announced.

Twelve Enter Sing

The Interfraternity sing, in which 12 fraternities are entered, will begin at 7:30, and the winners will be announced by the members of the Phi Epsilon, according to Ralph Smith '25, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the sing.

The judges, Professors P. W. Dykema, E. B. Gordon, and E. E. Swinney have announced that the judging will be based on rhythm, tone, intonation, balance, enunciation, interpretation, selection, and appearance.

Smith Heads Committee

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Ralph Smith '25, chairman, Robert Nethercut '24, Carroll Robb '24 and Frederick Nimmer '24. The fraternity groups will appear in alphabetical order as follows:

Acacia, Alpha Delta Phi, Alpha Kappa Lambda, Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Psi Upsilon and Sigma Pi.

Welcome will be extended to the freshmen to the higher brotherhood of the university by Walter A. Frauschi '24, in his address at 8:30 o'clock.

The members of the four classes will adjourn at 8:45 o'clock to the lower campus where each class will gather in the corner of the field marked by the class numerals, according to Fred W. Gustorf '25, for the bonfire ceremony.

Sinclair to Light Fire

Miss Virginia Sinclair, president of the freshman class will be escorted to the center of the lower campus by Frauschi, president of the senior class. The fire will be lighted by the freshman class president at 9 o'clock.

"Around the embers of the fire Varsity will be sung. When the freshmen have done a snake dance on the lower campus and down State street, Varsity night will be over, and the class of '27 will have become the sophomore class of Wisconsin," Miss Sinclair stated last night.

Summer Cardinal Staff Holds First Meet Next Monday

The first meeting of those who wish to work on The Cardinal during the summer session will be held Monday noon at 12 o'clock in the editorial offices of the Union building.

Because it is the plan to keep the summer session issues up to the standard of the regular issues, it will be imperative to have more reporters and writers this summer than in the past, according to Eliot Sharp '25, managing editor of the summer Cardinal.

Those who are now working on The Cardinal as well as those who have never done any news writing, but who would like to during the summer, are requested to be present at the meeting.

Coolidge Luck!

It Is All in His Face, Asserts Washington Psychologist

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE ANALYZED

By DR. WM. M. MARSTON
 Washington Psychologist and Psycho-Analyst

President Calvin Coolidge, the political enigma, need be no puzzle to a psychologist.

His face and head are examples of perfect balance and proportion. Nothing is in excess, save possibly the chin point.

Let us begin with the presidential nose. The profile picture shows a nose that any man might well be proud of.

From its beginning, slightly above the eyes, in a deep in-curve indicating quick and intelligent decision in sudden emergencies, this nose sweeps downward in a long, finished line of good proportions.

Never could the owner of such a nose act in any but the most highly civilized way.

Eyes Blend Perfectly
 The Coolidge eyes, also, are models. They are neither appetitive nor sexual.

If a dot were placed at the uppermost point of each socket, and a perpendicular dropped from this dot, the line thus made would divide each eye into two nearly equal triangles. One of these triangles would point out, the other in.

If found alone, one would denote sex, and the other appetite. But since both are equal, and both are found in each eye, we find that rarest of all human blends, appetitive-sex, which is a thing by itself, and might be called "loving force."

When a man has such a remarkable development as that indicated in the president's eyes, things just come to him because they have to, as apples drop to earth.

Drawing lines straight down from the outer corners of the presidential eyes to the mouth corners below, and then extending these lines to the chin, we find that just the chin and not the jaws, are included within the ends of these lines. Again, the whole chin is included, not merely the tip. This simply gives us another example of the perfect proportion of the Coolidge face.

But Mouth Isn't Big
 That mouth looks too big, unless you measure it. But when you do, as suggested, you find it is made to order.

Moreover, a mere glance discloses the Cupid's bow of both upper and lower lips, indicating that Coolidge, if he talked, would talk of the best interests of people other than himself.

But between the Cupid's bow and its string in a long, evenly curved line, rather thick, as seen in the front view picture. That line means that Coolidge neither talks nor eats to excess.

Finally, we must note the Coolidge chin and forehead. They go together. If it were not for the forehead, the chin, with its too great forward thrust, would prove a weakness; in fact, as it is, it indicates a certain insistence upon form which an executive might well dispense with.

To sum up:

From Calvin Coolidge's highly civilized nose we can expect perfect smoothness of action.

From his forehead, we may expect that action to be minutely thought out, and inflexibly carried to its designated conclusion.

While the Coolidge eyes and mouth see and deal with what must be gotten and what must be given in a ratio that can only be designated as heavenly.

Psychologically, "Cal's" face is his luck.

Today's Fashion Hint

The scarf-sleeve is the interesting feature of this frock and is one that could be easily copied. It consists merely of a length of crepe applied to the under portion of a very short sleeve. The collar on this imported frock fastens in the back and a double girdle keeps the lines very trim about the hips.

Clever Comedy to Be Staged Here Saturday

150 Young People Will Take Part in "Eeny Meeny" Production

The production of "Eeny Meeny," which will be given tomorrow afternoon and evening by 150 of Madison's prominent young people at the Central High school auditorium, has created much interest also because of the use it makes of the old fairy tale of "The Sleeping Beauty." The musical comedy, enlivened with modern songs and humor is even more attractive than the old story. The play is given in three acts with a royal setting. Miss Ruth Mathews has directed the production.

Miss Ruth Page as the princess is adopted after being chosen from a large group of children by the "eeny meeny miny mo" method. At the christening, the three leading women of the city are invited, but four appear. The trouble begins when the fourth lady, by accident, fails to receive some of the refreshments. The arrival of the "mean of the hour" in the last act saves the situation.

Hotel Open to Guests; Plan Formal Party

Lorraine To Have Private Taxi Line; McDonnell Is Manager

Accommodations for several guests have been prepared at the Lorraine hotel although the official opening will not be held for at least two weeks, it was announced at the hotel Friday.

The hotel when completed will have its own passenger bus operating from the hotel to the depots. The bus will be the largest hotel bus in the city with a capacity of 15 passengers. The company is also completing arrangements for five Red Top taxicabs to be brought here.

Arrangements for the formal opening party are being made. The private band of the Wisconsin Hotel Co., Milwaukee, will be brought here to furnish the music for the party.

Management of the hotel will be in the hands of W. J. McDonnell, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Chicago. The hotel will give employment to 50 persons.

The premature opening of the hotel was made to accommodate delegates to the telephone men's convention which opens here next week.

Rev. Williams Lauds Clergy Compensation Adopted At Presbyterian Assembly

The adoption of a pension plan for every employed worker of the Presbyterian church was the outstanding feature of the general assembly of the church recently held in Grand Rapids, Mich., according to Rev. W. D. Williams of the Parkside Presbyterian church who has returned from the conference.

"The new plan is virtually a group insurance worked out by actuaries," said Mr. Williams. "If 3,000 churches adopt the plan it will be possible to pay an annuity at the age of 65, to ministers, missionaries and others amounting to half their average salary during the preceding 30 years. The ministers pay two and a half percent of their salary and the congregation seven and a half percent of the same amount to build up a reserve to furnish the annuities."

10 Gallons of hot water for the price of a newspaper

It seems like a whole heap of hot water, and very little to pay for heating it.

It is! Ten gallons will do a big Monday's washing. It will do a big day's dishes, or provide a refreshing bath. But it could not be heated so cheaply or conveniently except with a Pittsburgh Automatic Gas Water Heater.

The Pittsburgh Automatic Gas Water Heater controls the supply of gas automatically and cuts your gas bills way down. Not a speck of gas wasted.

Special Sale

Saturday is the last day of our special sale. Act now and take advantage of the liberal allowance of $15.00 for your old heater on the purchase of a Pittsburgh. Special terms, $22 down, $19.00 a month. Make a small payment down Saturday and we will install the Pittsburgh when you are ready for it.

Float Entries
Complete For Venice Night

Final Arrangements for Lake Carnival are Completed

With 16 floats entered in the parade, a number of new features added, and fireworks and light displays of all kinds, Venetian night, will close the social activities of the university for the academic year tomorrow night.

Final details are being worked out by the various committees to insure the best Venetian day and night that has ever been held and the various events have been so arranged as to give a whole day of entertainment to the students and visiting high school athletes who will be here for the thirtieth

Interscholastic track meet.

A gold watch, given by Gamm's jewelry store, will be awarded as another prize to the best decorated, and most effective and spectacular float or canoe on the lake.

The general public, through the use of written ballots, will be the judges for the awarding of this prize given by Gamm's. Ballots have been printed which will be passed out and upon which the spectators can write the description or name of the float or canoe they deem best according to effective and spectacular decorations. Numerous ballot boxes will be stationed around in which to place the ballots.

Entry List Increased

The entry list of floats, which has been increased from nine to 16 in the last two days, is made up of the following organizations:

Phi Mu, Alpha Omicron Pi, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Gamma Delta, Phi Omega Pi, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Delta Pi, Chadbourne hall, Alpha Chi Rho, Theta Chi, International club, Delta Chi, Phi Kappa Tau, Gamma

Phi and Kappa Alpha Theta.

The float which is scheduled for 7:45 o'clock, will form at the pump-house pier where the barges will line up according to places assigned by the float committee. The judging will take place off the Y. M. C. A. pier, where the three judges will be stationed.

A 1,000 foot rope will be attached to the last barge and canoes will also be towed by the Isabel which will pull the parade. The canoes will hook on the rope two abreast. In order to prevent any accident the parade committee urges that the canoes will not form in rows of more than two abreast or one on each side of the rope.

Pass Through Gates

Gates will be placed in front of the judging pier so that only one float and two canoes can pass through at a time. This will give the judges a fairer chance to decide which float will carry off the honors and will prevent canoes from hanging on the sides of the barges as they pass in review.

The three persons who will act as judges are Frances H. Landon, instructor in the school of Music, Christopher A. Wiepking, instructor in mechanics, and Sterling Tracy '22.

To Illuminate Lake

With colored spots and flood lights playing on the floats from the two barges, piers and the boat house, the floats and lake front will be brilliantly illuminated. The decorated canoes, each lighted by two Japanese candles and the 250 red and green flares, which will be set off simultaneously from the piers along the lake front, will form a spectacle of moving lights that will reflect in every direction on the water.

At 8:30 o'clock, "Mac" Simpkins '26, flaming in gasoline, will make a number of fire dives on the lake front. At 9 o'clock the fireworks will be set off and "The Lost Ship" will be run out onto the lake.

A printed program of the evening's events will be distributed among the spectators so that they will be informed of the various stunts and the time that they are to take place.

Crew Races Scheduled

In the morning the events of Venetian day will be run off on the lake front of the university boat house at the "Y" pier. At 10 o'clock the inter-class crews will race over the mile course and at 10:15 o'clock the second varsity crew will meet St. John's military academy over the mile and one-quarter course.

The aquaplaning race with five entries will take place at 11 o'clock and a demonstration rescue will be put on by the Cardinal and Isabel at 11:15 o'clock.

—Basement Store

TODAY At Baron's BY MARY MAC

I toured the Basement Store the other day, and discovered that the woman who has a limited wardrobe budget can do wonderfully down there. An excellent showing of summer frocks at $16.50 caught my eye, and when I looked them over I found that there wasn't a one I wouldn't be delighted to wear. They are copies of very exclusive models, purchased through an arrangement with our New York office, and really, they represent wonderful values. There are many of them that I imagined would cost $25 or $35.

And then there are wonderful offerings in sport apparel in the basement. A pleated skirt of a silk and wool fabric very similar to Roshanara is splendid purchase for $5.39. To accompany it is a sports vest of gay flannel, trimmed with white braid—the very newest of flannel waistcoats. It is made of genuine Parker and Wilder flannel, yet it costs but $3.48. You can select from a large array of colors—red, tan, powder, jade, rosewood, black.

You will find many such bargains in the basement store—hosiery, blouses, silk underwear, house dresses, linen frocks—all of them at surprisingly much less than you would expect to pay.

Welcome news for many is the opening of the stationery section on the Main Floor. I looked over the display of correspondence papers yesterday, and it is very fine. Eaton, Crane & Pike's is the feature line—you no doubt know what an excellent quality that is.

Combine your beauty shop visit with your shopping tour! Visit the Marinello Shop on our second floor when you are shopping tomorrow—you will find it a veritable storehouse of beauty. Courteous attention, expert treatment, experienced attendants—all combine to make this one of Madison's most popular shops. You too will enjoy coming here!

Miss Collins of the Binner corset company will be here tomorrow to personally fit you. Miss Collins' work has delighted all of her many callers during the time she has been here. She is an experienced corsetiere, and her fitting work is excellent. You will find her in the Corset Shop, 2nd floor.

Notice the specials that are advertised for tomorrow! Many a chance to save there, and of course there are many more that are not included in the advertisement.

If you shop by phone or mail, I'll shop for you.

Joe related one of his first and most embarrassing moments to the writer yesterday. It seems that when Joe first came to America he could speak little or no English. At the time he was located in Akron, Ohio, and feeling the need of food entered one of the numerous restaurants run by the children's. He tried to explain to the waiter that he wished a plate of fried eggs, but to no avail. Finally in desperation the immigrant boy squatted on his haunches

List 48 Cases For Superior Court Session

43 Civil, 5 Criminal Actions
Slated for June
Term

A total of 48 actions are listed in the June calendar of the superior court printed Thursday. Of the total, five are criminal actions, and 43 are civil actions, 22 being cases requiring a jury trial and 21 being fact for court.

Among the criminal actions listed is the case of the state against Louis Scherer, William Gilbert and Elmer Hanson, charged with violating the fish and game laws.

The action of Vera Gorst against School district No. 8 is listed for trial by jury. Miss Gorst, suing Frank Zwertler, Dan J. Lynch and Charles Booth, members of the board, alleged that they improperly terminated her contract. She asks $580.30 in wages.

State Hospital Will Be Ready August 15

Work on the new Wisconsin State hospital will be completed August 15, marking the end of exactly two years of continuous labor. H. C. Stuart, state architect's superintendent, in charge of the work, said yesterday.

The first floor will be ready for occupancy by the university clinic by the contract date of June 15, but it is probable that not attempt will be made to use the building before July first, since work on the upper stories would have to be carried on whether the clinic department on the first floor was being used or not.

Mr. Huart pointed out that the clinic would be working under considerable handicap, since all materials used in the work above the first floor must go through the main entrance.

At present there are about eighty men engaged in completing the structure, which it is claimed, is one of the largest in the state, accommodating 200 beds. One feature of the work is the hanging of over 700 doors.

Huge Throng Welcomes Maj. Martin In Chicago

CHICAGO — A great welcome of throngs and cheers was tendered Maj. Frederick Martin, on his return here from Alaska where his command of the Round-the-world army fliers, attended by misfortune, the cheers were given equally to the major and Sergeant Alva Harvey, his mechanic.

Met by a great throng of military, naval men and civilians and accompanied for 100 miles by a squadron of airplanes from Chanute air field which he commanded before the world flight began, Maj. Martin and Sgt. Harvey received the acclaim given heroes.

West Side Water Supply Cleared of Murky Color

The murky condition of the city water on the West Side has been cleared up, it was announced by L. A. Smith, superintendent of the water department. Three tests conducted this week showed that the water has returned to normal. Rust forming in the mains was washed loose and entered the services when the pressure was increased as a result of connecting well No. 12.

Western Roads Order Fertilizer Rate Slash

Joint-Ease for Burning Feet

Now that we know that aching, burning feet are caused by troubles in the small bones in the arches of the feet—

And that trouble can only be reached by Joint-Ease, an active emollient that soaks right in through skin and flesh direct to the joints and ligaments.

Isn't it about time to discard powders and medicated baths that only reach the outside of the skin?

And rub on Joint-Ease, that in two minutes starts to soothe and heal the inside troubles that cause soreness and burning.

Rub it on tonight and if there is any burning left in the morning, it won't be enough to bother.

Always remember when Joint-Ease gets in foot agony and burning get out—quick—60 cents a tube.

Ex-Vamp Is 'Good Wife'

By A. H. FREDERICK

SAN FRANCISCO — A woman should know the ways of the world—and of men—before she becomes a wife.

So thinks the alluring, black-eyed Egyptian princess, Della Patra, once hailed as the Pacific Coast's "vamp," but today just a happy housewife in a happy home.

And the princess really ought to rate as an authority. Her own courtship some five years ago was a kaleidoscopic whirlwind.

It started with her arrest in New York and extradition at the instigation of one suitor; he is her husband now. She traveled through the courts and finally culminated in her marriage to Erich Bieble, an architect.

Through it all, hearts of judges, lawyers and a myriad of other men fell victims to the charm of those big black eyes.

But to get back to Della Patra's present-day opinions:

"I know Erich, and I couldn't be

Conservative Is Nominated By Baptists

Ex-Governor Milliken Is
Choice of Milwaukee
Election Body

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Former Gov. Carl E. Milliken, Portland, Me., Friday was nominated for the position of president of the Northern Baptist convention, meeting in annual session here. His name heads the list of nominations submitted to the convention by Dr. C. A. Barbour, Rochester, N. Y., chairman of the nominating committee.

Only one candidate for each office in the convention was selected. Mr. Milliken is considered to be neither an extreme fundamentalist, or a modernist and his chance of election Saturday are said to be favorable.

Illuminated Stockings Is Latest Paris Fad

Illuminated stockings are the latest wrinkle in hosiery fashions according to a recent Paris report. The 1924 model is splashed with a phosphorous substance that glows in the dark, giving a most fantastic appearance to the ankles of the wearer. They probably will not appear to any great extent on the Wisconsin campus, however, because they are very expensive and after one night's wearing they cease to throw off light.

Eric Miller Predicts Week-end of Sunshine

The week-end will be bright and sunny, according to Eric Miller, director of the weather bureau in North hall. There is no probability of rain; although the weather will not be any warmer. Winds shifting from north to north-west will prevent the warm weather from arriving for several days.

SEVENTY-THREE, BUT STILL IN GOOD HEALTH

Mrs. Franken, Says She Feels Like 50, Thanks To Tanlac.

Giving the Tanlac treatment credited for her past several years of good health, Mrs. Katherine Franken, 745 Moss Ave., Peoria, Ill., recently said:

"I am now seventy-three, but my friends say I look and get around as well as many women at fifty. The secret of it all lies in good health and the best recipe I know of for keeping one in good health is Tanlac. It built me up to fine health eight years ago, or more, and I have used it off and on ever since, and am feeling fine now."

"When I first took Tanlac indigestion was fast wrecking my health. I was troubled with gastric pains, nervousness, dizzy spells, headaches, pains in my back and limbs and was losing weight and color. Tanlac proved to be just what I needed then and it has not failed me since."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

PIONEERING in COFFEE

BACK in 1864 a firm set out to supply New England with good coffee. But they didn't stop there. As the country grew, they grew. When a railroad was pushed out and a town suddenly or slowly built up, Chase & Sanborn would be sure to entrust the sale of their coffees and teas to the very best groceryman they could find.

Then, about 1880, they originated the idea of packing coffee in hermetically sealed tins—that was to keep good coffee good.

To-day, wherever you go, in cities and villages that once might have been frontier posts or villages, you will find a certain bond among discriminating coffee drinkers. It is the goodness of Chase & Sanborn Seal Brand Coffee. It is packed in sealed tin cans—never in bulk.

Seal Brand Orange Pekoe Tea is of the same high quality as Seal Brand Coffee. In screw-top canisters only.

The LAND OF FORGOTTEN MEN

by Edison Marshall

Released by NEA Service, Inc.
Copyright 1923 by Little, Brown & Co.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Big Chris Larson, Alaska cannery, foreman, seeking boat connections for the outside world in a launch, is driven by a storm into a small cove.

He had met the Remittance Man that evening and stands on the storm-swept beach, pondering upon the latter's hard drinking, when he observes a distress signal from a ship at sea. He is about to board his launch to answer the call, when the Remittance Man joins him.

They join the launch crew and start to the rescue despite the storm.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Big Chris turned toward the door. Captain Jim smiled grimly when the Remittance Man got up, too.

"You are no sailor," he commented.

"Nope! That part of my education was neglected. But any one who has done as much fancy balancing to keep his feet as I have in the last year will be a steady man in the tops! I'll go out and be in that big Norwegian's way."

The mellow, easy voice some way heartened the man at the wheel. His pale blue eyes frankly studied the handsome, clean-cut face, now plainly revealed in the light of the pilot house. This southerner had wasted the birthright of a powerful physique. He was a tall man, extremely broad of shoulder and big of bone and his careless glance might have attributed to him even such physical power as that of Big Chris, whom he resembled greatly in build. But there was no iron in those big, loose muscles.

There was still, in his face, the lingering image of what had unquestionably been a general allowance of real, mainly good, looks. The captain's gaze was quick and penetrating tonight, and he could see back into the man's past; he could see the man of which this half-drunken, dissipated creature was the image. Far away, and not long ago, he had been a youth of the greatest personal charm; well bred, perfect mannered, affectionate and good-natured, amiably weak yet chivalrous, quick to sympathize and friendly to inferiors, but recognizing no superiors; a certain well-loved type of southern gentleman of an old school.

Curiously enough the man was clean-shaven; and the only explanation was that the lingering image of self-respect that kept him from crossing his blood with the Aleuts also kept him personally well-groomed. His beard, however, would have been decidedly brown; his shock of curly hair was light brown.

"All right," Captain Jim pronounced at last. "Go out and help Big Chris all you can."

The Remittance Man turned in obedience, and the tilting, wave-washed deck brought him to sobriety quickly. The danger of the night and the stars, most of all the eternity of plunging waves on which the ship was borne awakened an odd, dark mood, stranger to him in all the reckless, happy years of his youth. Some way he saw this North of his in a new light. For the first time since he had come here, he was sober enough to catch the real tone, to feel the spirit of these desolate seas and the eerie, savage, rock-bound shores they washed. He had never thought about them in particular before. He had simply lived in a night mare world of drink and all the stern magic of this land had passed him by. But he was receptive to it tonight.

It was a mood as could easily hurl him into tragic regrets if he had let himself go—if he had not long ago forsaken all regrets. In the first place there was no particular act of his—not even the tragic mistake of the launch ride on the Savannah River to which he could attribute his downfall; it had really been a combination of circumstances, many of which had been beyond his direct control.

He had been weak, true enough—drinking rather too much than was good for him, but no more than other men of his class, and not one-tenth as hard as he was drinking now in forgetfulness. He had been jealous with little cause; but this was also a human trait. It was simply that—for all his auspicious beginning, his care-free youth and months with Dorothy's cards of fate had been stacked against him. So it was neither wise nor fitting that he should yield himself to regret. There was no use of fighting when there was nothing to win. He could never go home. He must always be a fugitive from the world of men. He must stay here till he died.

It seemed to him now that this ultimate end was nearer than he had ever dreamed. There was a strange sense of finality about this voyage.

The wind was like a whiplash out of the northwest, stinging his eyes, buffeting him as he braced himself on the tilting deck, seeking every little entrance through sleeve and collar into his vitals. In the loneliness of his mood it did not occur to him at once that his fellow watchman might be likewise suffering. He only knew the truth when Big Chris paused beside him, cursing.

"God, I wish I had my coat," he said. "Like dam fool I lief it in dat native's shack—"

The Remittance Man gazed at him in quick amazement. It was true: Chris' heavy mackinaw shirt alone saved him from the lash of the cold.

"Good Lord, I wish you'd take mine," the Remittance Man answered promptly. "I'm sweating like a horse—"

He saw the look of incredulous amazement in Larson's face. "Yes, you are—" he began in derision.

"I am, no fooling. I guess it's the liquor—besides, I've got a caribou shirt underneath." He quickly threw off his heavy seaman's coat and held it out. "Wear it a while, anyhow—we're about the same build and it will fit you to a T. I'll holler for it back as soon as I feel chilly."

Big Chris muttered, but slipped the garment on. He could not doubt those ringing words; otherwise wild

Presently he turned away, leaving this man of cities almost unprotected in the blast of the wind.

Why he had acted as he did, he could not have told you. The dying liquor had chilled him, rather than warmed him, nor was there any hint of cold-defying caribou hide under his outer garment of heavy flannel.

He could not exist long in such cold as this. The frost seemed to penetrate his vitals. The dawn was breaking over the sea, incredible after this night of storm and dark-horses could not have forced the coat across his brawny shoulders, less; but it brought no mercy from the cold. Either he must leave his watch and seek shelter below, or else perish on the deck.

He turned, at last, toward the pilot house; but it was the strangest thing in all his strange life that he had little real desire to go. It was not that he was vitally needed on the deck. Rather, it was an outgrowth of the night's dark mood; he had seen the end toward which he was drifting all too plain. At least there would be some semblance of decency in such a death—to be stricken lifeless by the cold in his keeping of his watch.

But the Remittance Man never reached the pilot-house door. There was one strange, bewildering, blinding instant of incredible stress, a quick, cracking, explosive sound that hardly had time to reach his ear drums, and then the swift realization, like a rocket's flare, of irrevocable disaster. The ship reeled, rent, the cruel crags ripped, caught, hurled it over; and the dark waves, foam-crested, roared, plunged and smothered it in an instant. The man's lips opened in one despairing cry; and then he was swept and hurled into darkness.

CHAPTER II

Bad News for Dorothy

From Dorothy Newhall's favorite chair where often she sat cross-legged like a tailor, she could look through the broad library window across velvet lawns and a flowering hedge, and thence straight down the long, white boulevard of Walton Way. It was characteristic of a certain part of her that in late years had come into the ascendancy that she preferred this view to that from the wide glass spaces of the sun parlor, the vista of dark pines, deep in shadow, and the fields stretching to the arid of the Georgia sun. Dorothy's father-in-law had contrived the sun parlor for his own delight, and in his lifetime had been rather intolerant of the stream of motor cars that flowed ceaselessly up Augusta's most fashionable street; but there were all parts of Dorothy's life. Today she saw the colored messenger boy, pedaling stiffly up the grade, before ever he had contrived the sun parlor for his tourist hotel on the brow of the hill.

She had time in plenty to watch him, and nothing better to do. Since tragedy had overtaken this household, something over a year before, she had had full cause to watch for telegrams; a swift premonition told her that the boy was heading straight toward her door.

She had no great sense of surprise when the boy turned into her own beautifully curving driveway, circled to the wide veranda, leisurely propped up his wheel, and passed beyond the range of her vision as he mounted the veranda steps to her door. Dorothy got up slowly from her chair. She walked freely through the door, took time to glance once at a great bouquet of flowers, and her hand was steady as she signed for the message. Then her fluttering fingers tore it open.

The next moment was a blank forever in her life. She had no memory of that first reading; yet when consciousness streamed back to her a moment later she lay half-sprawled over the great steely in the alcove just off the hall, and she knew the burden, if not the exact wording, of the message.

The yellow slip still lay in her hand. She did not look at it at once. Instead she lay with closed eyes and the world swept through space, and time moved as in the grayness of half-sleep. She raised her hand slowly, and the message came with it; and slowly, laboriously, she read it through again.

It had been filed in the wireless office at Pirate Cove, in Alaska—a place of which she had never heard—and had unquestionably come by wireless to Seattle, whence it was sent by wire across the continent. It did not mince words:

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BEDTIME STORIES

By HOWARD GARIS

(Copyright, 1924 by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE CAR-

PET TACKS

"Uncle Wiggily, if you want to do anything while I am out today," said Nurse Jane to the bunny gentleman on a Friday morning, "you might pull the tacks out of the parlor carpet and spread it on the grass."

"Oh, ho!" laughed the rabbit uncle. "Thank you! And, I suppose, after I pull the tacks out of the carpet I can put the carpet out on the grass and beat the dust out."

"You may if you wish," answered Nurse Jane, "but I was going to have the circus elephant come in and beat the carpet with his trunk."

"Oh, no!" said Uncle Wiggily quickly. "I don't want to. Taking the tacks out will be enough for me."

"You'll find the tack puller on the shelf over the cellar stairs," explained the muskrat lady, "and after you take the tacks out of the carpet you may go adventuring, if you wish."

"I guess I'll wish to all right, after pulling tacks," said the bunny "it's hard work. Where are you going, Janie?"

"Down to the seven and eight cent store to get a new pair of diamond ear-rings," answered the muskrat lady, and away she hopped, while Uncle Wiggily, slowly twinkling his pink nose, went to look for the tack lifter, or puller. He found two of them on the shelf over the cellar stairs.

"Hum! Two tack pullers," murmured Mr. Longears. "I suppose Nurse Jane thinks I can use one in each paw and work twice as fast. Or maybe she put two here in case one breaks. Or perhaps she thinks some of my friends, like Mr. Whitewash the polar bear, or Mr. Twistytail the pig gentleman, will happen along and help me. Well, anyhow, I'll take one puller and start to get the tacks up. After that I'll go adventuring."

Uncle Wiggily began pulling out the tacks, using one of the lifters. "Snap!" out flew one of the sharp pointed little nails that held the carpet to the floor. "Snap!" out flew another tack.

"It's rather fun, after all," said Uncle Wiggily. But he had not pulled many tacks before he began to get a pain in his back. Then his rheumatism began to hurt. "Ouch! Smouch! This isn't as much fun as I thought," murmured the rabbit. He sat down in the middle of the floor and looked out of the window.

He saw Curly and Floppy Twistytail, the piggie boys, rooting around in a field.

The little pigs, with their funny, strong, rubbery noses would lift up stones and look underneath for sweet grass, roots and other good things to eat. Stone after stone they flipped up and turned over.

"Why?" cried Uncle Wiggily, "it's just as if they were pulling tacks! It's the same motion! Ah, I have an idea! I'll fasten a tack lifter to the piggie boys' noses and get them in here. They can't take the tacks out of the carpet much better than I can, and I'll pay them for it."

So the rabbit gentleman called out of the window, asking the two little pigs to come in.

"I'll give you each ten cents if you pull the tacks from the carpet for me," said Curly.

"I'll fasten tack pullers on your noses," said the bunny.

"That will be fine!" cried the piggie boys. So a tack lifter was tied on Floppy's nose, with strong cord, and another on his brother's nose. Then the little pigs went around the edges of the carpet, sticking the pullers under the edges of the tacks and lifting them out.

"Snap! Snap! Snap!" went the tacks as they flew out.

"We're having fun!" granted Curly. "And we're earning money to buy lollypops," squealed Floppy. "Oh, lollypops are good to eat!" he joyfully sang.

"So are Uncle Wiggily's ears!"

"All right! I've had enough tacks for today!" howled the Fox, and away he ran, not nibbling the bunny's ears after all.

Then Curly and Floppy laughed and pulled out the remainder of the tacks and Uncle Wiggily gave them ten cents each. And when Nurse Jane came home, she said:

"Well, Wiggily, you got all the tacks out, I see!"

"Oh, yes," answered the bunny indifferently. "It wasn't so hard the way I did it!" and he whistled, sailed and twinkled his pink nose.

And if the little aradine doesn't spatter olive oil on the salt cellar steps so the sugar cookie slips down, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's lollypop party.

Every group of furniture in a room should have a source of light, either natural or artificial, or both. The light should be directed from behind and over the left shoulder if at all possible.

groveled a voice, and the rabbit gentleman, who was resting himself in a corner, jumped up. The Fuzzy Fox started to jump in the window.

"Sold on! None of that!" grunted Floppy, on with the litter on his nose he pulled out a sharp tack.

"Zing!" the tack sailed through the air and struck the Fox on the nose. "Now, it's my turn!" shouted Curly. He, too, pulled out a tack, and this, also, struck the Fox on the nose, pricking him hard.

"All right! I've had enough tacks for today!" howled the Fox, and away he ran, not nibbling the bunny's ears after all.

Then Curly and Floppy laughed and pulled out the remainder of the tacks and Uncle Wiggily gave them ten cents each. And when Nurse Jane came home, she said:

"Well, Wiggily, you got all the tacks out, I see!"

"Oh, yes," answered the bunny indifferently. "It wasn't so hard the way I did it!" and he whistled, sailed and twinkled his pink nose.

And if the little aradine doesn't spatter olive oil on the salt cellar steps so the sugar cookie slips down, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's lollypop party.

Daily Puzzle

A HOBO STONED THE DOG THAT BIT THE LITTLE GIRL.

The sentence contains the name of the city where the event occurred. The name is there, in plain view, with all its letters in their correct order. Can you find it?

Yesterday's answer:

The heavy lines show the correct course to follow around and among the letters. The sentence thus discovered spells "Patience is a virtue."

DINNER GOWNS

For dinner gowns Paris is featuring black with a great deal of color introduced as facings, sashes or embroidery.

FOR SPORTS

Hand knitted sport costumes and capes are imported from Germany and Vienna, where labor is cheap, and are creating quite a sensation over here.

Memorial Day

DEATH, the Final Conqueror, is rapidly thinning the ranks of the Boys in Blue and the Boys in Gray. In a few more years the last of the Civil War veterans will have joined their comrades on "fame's eternal camping ground."

Memorial Day originated in honor of the heroes who made the supreme sacrifice in the Civil War. It has taken on a wider significance, and includes our departed heroes of the Spanish-American War and World War.

Veterans will march this Memorial Day. Bands will play, flags fly, flowers be strewn on graves.

But if the dead could speak, they would rise in their millions and plead for an end to all wars. Peace is the soldiers' goal.

All honor to the heroic men of battle. But in honoring them, let all of us remember that we are in the presence of tragedy.

Let Memorial Day stimulate us to work for lasting peace, rather than the day spreading militaristic sentiment and false glory that can only help perpetuate the Great Illusion—war and all its misery.

Cupid's Sense of Humor

WEDDING invitations are being sent out by this year's crop of June brides. People soon will be saying, "I wonder what she sees in him?" or "What do you suppose made him fall for her?"

Queer teams often stand up before the clergyman, to live happily (or unhappily) forever after.

Well-mated couples there are, plenty of them. But now and then cupid seems to have a sense of humor.

NATURE is a specialist at standardization. Blades of grass are much alike when matured. So are lions, camels, elephants, violets, trees.

People seem to vary more than any other form of life. Out of millions upon millions, duplicates are rare. It is almost phenomenal when a person doesn't have some distinctive marking or eccentricity or manner distinguishing him from all others.

Nature isn't very keen on this tendency to vary from type. She is constantly striving to restore the balance—to keep the individuals of the race as much alike as possible.

That's why Beauty marries the Beast. It also explains marriages of big men and little women, fat women and slender men, intellectuals mating with average intelligence.

THERE'S a wise old saying about people having most chances of being happy if they marry opposites. The popular interpretation of this is that blonds should marry brunettes.

But it applies equally to other personal differences.

Take a husband brainier than his wife. He enjoys helping her improve her mind. She "looks up to" him with respect. Other way around, too—an inferior husband respects the good judgment of his brainier wife.

Or one party to the nuptial state may excel in one trait and the mate in another. Each admires what he or she lacks and the other has in character, brains and disposition.

In the final analysis, all this probably is nature's system of restoring glandular balance to the race. For instance, a person with a sluggish thyroid gland is apt to be dull and indolent. When this type mates with a husband or wife possessed of an overactive thyroid, children are apt to have normal thyroid. The parents compensate or balance the thyroid situation.

So, then, never laugh at a "queer match." There's a reason.

Memorial Day
Patriotism Lesson

By GEN. J. R. SHERWOOD
Civil War Veteran; America's Oldest Congressman.

Memorial day is observed in the north on May 30 and on varying dates in the south. But the spirit is the same everywhere—a day set aside out of respect for the soldiers and sailors of the republic.

The greatest benefit to be derived from Memorial day observance is the lesson of patriotism.

We learn on that day that the people of the republic do not forget and we feel certain that they never will forget the men who fought and bled for one and only one purpose—

THE PRESERVATION OF THE NATION!

KEAGLE IN CATHOLIC HOSPITAL
[To The Editor]—We would like to call the attention of Mrs. Anna Thrasher of Mineral Point to the fact that when Young, the Klan Keagle in Illinois, was shot he was taken to a Catholic hospital at Belleville and is now receiving treatment there. The very people whom Young has been condemning are now endeavoring to save his life. Would the Klan do as much for a Catholic in distress?—Inquirer.

A FORECAST OF THE ELECTION

[To The Editor]—La Follette has already been declared the presidential choice of liberal state conventions in Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin and several other states. He will be formally nominated for president by the national farmer-labor convention at St. Paul June 17, and by the national conference for Progressive political action in Cleveland July 4. He will accept these nominations, make the race, and receive a larger popular vote than Coolidge, the certain Republican nominee, in every state west of the Alleghenies, with the possible exceptions of Utah, Missouri, Louisiana and Ohio. He will receive a larger popular vote than Coolidge in at least two states east of the Alleghenies. He will receive a larger electoral vote, won mainly by state pluralities, as Wilson's was in 1912, and a very much larger popular vote than did Roosevelt in 1912. As in 1912 the race will be between the Democratic and third party tickets. Coolidge, like Taft, will run a bad third.

If the Democrats nominate an ultra-conservative candidate, as Underwood or Davis, La Follette will get more electoral votes than either old party nominee, but may fail to win a majority of the electoral college.

If the Democrats nominate Smith of Tammany hall he will get the largest popular vote run first or second in the electoral college, but will fail to get a majority.

If the Democrats nominate McAdoo, his southern Ku Klux Klan backing will cost him every northern state, the more certainly since he does not appeal to the farmers and since La Follette will capture the bulk of the so-called labor vote.

If the Democrats nominate a league of nations and world court advocate, as Ralston of Indiana or Cox of Ohio, he will fail to win an electoral college majority.

If the election of a president has to be made by the national house of representatives, La Follette will be elected president and the Democratic nominee for vice president will be chosen to that office.

The only ghost of a chance the Democrats have to elect a president in November is the chance that they will nominate Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, their most brilliant and powerful campaigner, and their one outstanding leader whose public attitude upon all of the major issues of the campaign is in line with that of a majority of the American people regardless of parties. His defeat as a presidential candidate in the local party conventions of his own state, when it was well known that he could have carried the state in any popular primary or election, has not eliminated him from the minds of the party leaders as a possible nominee.

I have not mis-called a presidential election in 30 years. It seems to me this one is singularly easy to read in advance of the event.—Frank Putnam, Milwaukee, Wis.

FOOTBALL

Is college football becoming too commercialized? One university's profits from this sport last year were about $40,000. College heads are wondering if football isn't shaping as a business rather than an athletic game.

Professionalism in the boxoffice is as much a menace as professionalism among players. Sport for sport's sake is endangered when the sport becomes a medium for tapping the public pocketbook.

Dates of Memorial Day

Ticks o' the Times

By PENROD

You threw the torch,
Whom Martian hatred killed.
Today, take stock—
Have we our charge fulfilled?

The blood you spent,
To teach that hate must end—
The lives you gave,
Might sin and grief amend.

Because you died,
Love we the more, our kind.
Have kings less greed,
Ave thrones to empire blind?

Count we the less,
Desire for land and gold?
Or, is man's chivalrous slant,
Cast from a better mold?

You sigh?—You Flanders dead,
Give faint ironic smile,
The game's a new one, now,
Life mocks at Death awhile.

We may be pardoned a few tender reminiscences today of the great Speedway races down in Indianapolis we used to attend.

Back in the days when they were quite new, the annual Memorial day race was the topic of all juvenile conversation for weeks before. No sleep all the night before. Up about 5 a. m. and to the city for a train. There were several ways of getting out, the best by bumming a ride from a passing motorist.

In the first years, the roads from Indianapolis out to the Speedway were abominable. Seven solid miles of chuck-holes would greet the visitors. It was at least a three-hour run, including traffic jams. Thousands of cars would bottle up in the dirt confines of this highway and grind the surface to a yellow dust cloud.

Today it is different. There is a wide concrete road from the city to the track. A policeman is stationed every half mile or so. The first thing you hear as you turn on the concrete is a hearty admonition to "Step on 'er!" If you slow down to 35 an hour you're liable to be pinched.

In another way, the old races were different. It used to be quite the fashion to drive a carful of friends out, and take parking space in the open field in the center of the track, right up against the fence by the track itself.

But the best part of the story is that nearly everyone of these cars would have a large tin tub full of ice and water in which reposed in all their frigid glory, just gobs of bottles of good old Schlitz and Cock's Gold Blend. The spirit of the holiday was always in the air, too, and it was a funny fan that wouldn't give the veriest stranger a bottle or two for the asking.

I'm going fishing Sunday Morn,
I don't care if it's ten below.
I'm going fishing Sunday Morn,
E'en though all pleasure from it's short,
The neighbor's jibes I'll even scorn.
I'm going fishing Sunday Morn,
I don't care if it's ten below.

OH, BOY!

Herewith you will find enclosed to dissipate the gloom caused by a rainy Monday, and Lord knows we have had many of them as we in the show business can eloquently testify, two fine duets for the Friday evening performance of "The Passing Show," May 30th, in the hope that you and the good wife will enjoy same entertainment, it being the last road show of the season and coming here intact after a long transcontinental tour. I think you will enjoy Willie and Eugene Howard almost as much as I do your estimable column.

With every good wish, I am, sincerely,
Fischer's Parkway Theater.

THOUGHTS WHILE STROLLING ABOUT MADISON

Cretone pillows begetting visions of soft summer night only vine clad porches or gliding canoe, in Kessenich's windows. A tall, tattered gentleman, carrying a basket of geraniums. Probably the soul of a poet. Straw hats in the Wonder Store. Optimists! A lady of quality in white duck outfit and a winter overcoat. Hope and discretion, one might say.

The Century and Dial Magazines in a drug store newstands, they're everywhere in the city. Brisbane says Hearst pushed through the bonus so we can say, our Saturday reviews caused that. The Lorraine Hotel about completed. More important to our city than another ten thousand population. A good joke on the Parker Co.—a display card reading V-I-S-A-B-L-E Card Files. A lady looking at her own photograph in one of the studio display cases. What mingled emotions! There's Martin Dunn's tobacco shop sign still out. A good example of influence there. His allotted space in life was about 20 feet square, but he made more friends than some men could with an office building. Enough for today.

A post card mailed on Leap Year day, 1912, in Hull, England, has just reached its destination in Chicago.

ONLY A DROP

The total output of fertilizer that comes out with 40,000 tons of nitrogen which plant N. 2 is supposed to develop, will take care of but 1 percent of the soil depletion that is going on in the United States today. In other words, if you are really going to attack this fertilizer problem with 100 percent sincerity, you have a chance to build a hundred times the capacity of all that can be turned out from nitrate plant No. 2 at Muscle Shoals, and you still will only be keeping pace with the soil depletion. So you see the fertilizer end of this project is enormous.
